1. The munitions depot at Lozarevo continues to grow. It should now be regarded as not one, but several, depots. All these are dug into the slopes of the hill. They are tolerably camouflaged. Nevertheless some of these halfway underground depots will show up, if the observer uses the road to the Bodvez station as a guide.
2. The depots are built in four rows. Each row contains nine magazines. Packing cases of Soviet origin are still being brought in. Exact information on their contents has not been secured.
3. The present guard consists of one officer, two noncommissioned officers and 60 EM. There are also "subalterns" from the garrison of "Kolarovgrad," formerly Shumen, or Shumla. The strictness, unusual even in Bulgaria, with which control is maintained, indicates the importance attached to this munitions supply point. The officers in charge are believed to fear an attack on it by anti-Communist partisans, as the principal danger.
